Configuring

Configuring / Notifications / History record

History record notifications

You can configure history record notifications by doing the tasks described in this section.

After the initial configuration is complete, you should test your history record notifications to make sure they work as you expect them to.

In this section:

Defining history record notifications
You can use notifications to create records to be saved as part of job history. You can define history record notifications to capture timestamps of job state changes as a job is processed in its workflow.

Parent topic: Notifications